QUALITY PRINCIPLES FOR EFFECTIVE PROJECT MANAGEMENT • Presented by Jane Betterton

Effective management of projects is critical to an organization's overall success, but how can this work be measured and improved? Jane Betterton, a recognized expert in strategic planning, project management, organizational and personnel management, will share her experience and insights in working with the Organizational Project Management Maturity Model (OPM3). Developed by the Project Management Institute, this model provides a framework "... to advance your organization's strategic interests through the efficient and successful execution of projects". Ms. Betterton has specialized in working with organizations that have complex technical environments. She is the owner of the project management training company, BTS.

The program is part of the Quality Certificate Program offered by AQN, in partnership with the UNM Anderson School of Management.

The Albuquerque Quality Network (AQN) has been engaged in promoting education and training on quality principles and processes to improve organizational performance for twenty-five years.

AQN serves as a resource for businesses and organizations with regular breakfast seminars with speakers on performance measurement, process management, recognizing and building strengths, turning numbers into clear and useful information, and more. The topics are relevant to those on a "Quality Journey" with programs like Six Sigma, Lean, the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Awards, and others.

AQN recently partnered with the Anderson School of Management at the University of New Mexico for a certification program on quality management.
